WRITTEN OPINION OF THE INTERNATIONAL SEARCHING AUTHORITY (SEPARATE SHEET)

International application No.

PCT/US2005/042421

Re Item III.

The present application contains 182 claims, of which 15 are independent device claims.

Several of these independent claims, are so broad that a search would undoubtedly reveal a very large number of documents relevant to the issue of novelty, which would make it impossible to determine which parts of the claims may be said to define subject-matter for which protection might legitimately be sought (Article 6 PCT). This matter is rendered even more intractable by the large number of claims which depend directly on these broad independent claims.

Several independent claims are drafted as a statement of the result to be achieved by the device, or in terms of the method of using the device. These claims do not allow the reader to clearly recognise the technical features which might be so implied.

Further, there is no clear distinction between the independent claims because of overlapping scope.

There are so many claims, and they are drafted in such a way that the claims as a whole are not in compliance with the provisions of clarity and conciseness of Article 6 PCT, as it is particularly burdensome for a skilled person to establish the subject-matter for which protection is sought. The non-compliance with the substantive provisions is to such an extent, that no meaningful search is possible for the present application (PCT Guidelines 9.30).
